January 19, 2018 6 min Read The Opinions Expressed by Entrepreneur Contributors are their own. So you want to become a millionaire entrepreneur. You're not alone. Many dream of leaving their job and becoming their own boss while enjoying the different millionaire lifestyle we watch on TV. But there is a difference between those who dream of becoming millionaires and those who do. And it starts and ends with a mentality. If you don't develop that mindset, you'll keep spinning your wheels, working just as hard but never going anywhere. Developing a millionaire mindset requires you to stretch your thinking. Start by developing the following six attributes.

1. Have eyesight. If you aspire to become a millionaire at some point in your life, or you aspire to have a seven-figure business, you should get really clear why you want it. Throughout my 20s, making money was my why. A series of business successes and setbacks have taught me that it's not about money, it's about what money can do for you. - Why do you want to become a millionaire? You have to be really clear on your why, so when times get tough, or you don't want to wake up at 4am or make another cold call, you're pulled out to do it anyway. What impact do you want to have? What is the positive impact of achieving your seven-figure goal, and even more compelling than the negative impact is not achieving it? When we make our vision and our why of others, there is an exponential increase inspired by the actions that we will take to achieve it. Some of the greatest entrepreneurs in the world have very great missions. They know exactly where they're going and why they're going there. They are clear about the impact and legacy they are building. What is your influence? And what legacy do you want to build? The more you connect to your exposure, the more you will be willing to do uncomfortable things that lead to rapid growth. In addition, millionaire business owners now have a mentality. Instead of putting things aside, they do what is necessary now, no matter how scary or impossible it feels. Knowing why you do what you do and be now the kind of person will push you to get what you want. I love what you do. When you love what you do, it doesn't seem like a job. And, when you love what you do, money will inevitably flow to and through you. Even if, at the moment, you are working in a career or job you don't like, just a shift in how you think about it can change your whole mentality. Instead of mourning your work, think of it as your banker who supports you as you work, where you want to be. Speak life in your current situation and change your lifestyle so that you value your work for you have the means to continue the work you love.
3. Be solution-oriented. Be very clear on the problem your business solves. In addition, a focus on solutions means that you see solutions where others see problems, problems, your circumstance. So when things get tough and most people pack it up and go home, the millionaire mind knows that there is always a solution and that, no matter how big the problem or challenge is, it is a blessing in disguise. Even failure reaps the benefits that will serve you in the future. Related: The importance of thinking is great and believing in yourself, focusing on solutions rather than problems, you maintain a positive attitude and don't rattle circumstances beyond your control that can frustrate others. The more you grow as an entrepreneur, the more pressure, responsibility and problems. Millionaires are excited about their problems because they know that abundance lies on the other side. In addition, people who see solutions attract those who are looking for solutions. Constantly hone your leadership qualities. Focusing on your leadership skills will dramatically change and change everything in your life and business. Grab book 21 irrefutable laws of leadership and internalize it. The more you grow your leadership skills, the more you are going to attract other like-minded leaders into your business. One of my favorite irrefutable laws of leadership, the law of the container, teaches you to cover on your container. In other words, you are the one who limits the growth of your business. By enhancing your leadership skills, you will kick the lid off your business.
5. Be focused on growth. Millionaire business owners endlessly pursue personal growth and development. First of all, get a coach. My life has been influenced more by having a coach than anything else I've ever done in business or in life in general. Second, to be a coach. Often what happens when you are looking for wise advice is that you put up a wall between you and the feedback you receive. Know that a coach sees your business and life from an outside perspective that you can't. Believe that your coach has the wisdom and complete picture of perspectives that you just don't have. The more you hear and absorb feedback, the faster and further your business will grow. Related: This is how thinking about abundance has helped me build the success of Mindset6. Turn your thinking from business to being. People, especially entrepreneurs, are constantly doing things - a new car, a house, customers or whatever it is that will make them feel significant and good about themselves. They believe that once they become millionaires, they will really be significant and have done something worthwhile. But it's backwards. If you really want to have a million dollars, you must first be and think like a millionaire. By doing so, you will attract the necessary resources for you. It's not about doing something to something or to be someone. You have to be someone first, someone who has what she needs in order to take inspired action. To become a millionaire, you have to be a millionaire who like a millionaire who has what a millionaire has, in order to inspired action that the millionaire takes. Photo Ishan @seefromthesky unsplash. The millionaire thinking is the key to changing your condition. This is how you go from average results to great wealth. To become a millionaire, you must first learn to think, feel and behave like a millionaire. Once you have reached this thinking, you will have access to the riches of the world. If you want to be rich; Have a million dollar fortune and feel financially free, then you have to start with a millionaire mindset.
- 6 Steps to Millionaire mindset Invest in Yourself Invest in learning Don't work for money, work to learn Don't learn for fun, learn for value Invest in vehicles that will generate income. Shift your motivation from receiving to giving. Follow these six steps to get millionaire thinking and start changing your fortune today. Why don't I make millions? I, like many others in the world, was brought up with the message: Get a good job, work hard and you can enjoy a modest good life. This, I must admit, sounded like good advice. The bride and I had a good job and we lived well and saved a reasonable amount of money. But when we started thinking about how we wanted to live and the life we wanted for our future children, and how we wanted to live in retirement, we came to the realization that we would have to work very long and save a lot of money. And even then, we couldn't live the way we wanted to. I knew there was a better way. I knew there were people who lived a lot easier. And I wanted more than the usual plan. I wanted financial freedom. Millionaire Lessons So I need some new posts and some new lessons. I read mountains of stuff and one of the most useful resources that I found, the one that started me, was a blog that I read for free on Medium. I read Benjamin's article. Hardy, Do you want to be a multimillionaire? Do these 15 things immediately and decided that I'm going to start following some of his rules and try to see if he'll make a change. I would encourage all of you to read this article and learn directly from it what it means to live like a millionaire. However, at this stage I just want to explain how Rule 1-6 changed my way of thinking and put me on the path to success. Mindset1 Millionaire Rules. Invest at least 10% of your income in Shawn Kong's Yourself Photo on Unsplash. The main lesson of this rule is if you want to be a millionaire you have to be committed. If you just have dreams and plans, you will never be forced to make the kind of change needed for the type of life you want. Also, if you want to earn millions, you have to have the skills to earn millions. You have to be worth it. To become worthwhile you need to invest in the development yourself and you need to invest real dollars so you take it seriously. Success Lesson So if I would earn a big and become a million dollar year breadwinner I needed to invest in myself. Who to who Since I started with research and take advantage of the free information online. As my ideas became more focused I started making small investments in books that I thought would have valuable knowledge that I would require. I bought a few books that I would expand at a later date, but thinking of them as an investment of my precious time and money. I read them with purpose and absorbed all the knowledge they had to offer on the success of becoming and making millions of dollars. To read about some of the books that have increased my understanding, my confidence and my millionaire thinking, follow these links: The next step was before playing a small amount. From my research and reading I learned the importance of internet resources and the power to be part of a professional community. So I invested in a subscription to Medium. Knowing the valuable ideas contained in it, and that it cost me valuable money, I was banished to read every day. This kept me focused with the kind of reading that was aimed at making money and being influential in the 21st century. It also kept me informed of what was happening in the world. But most importantly, it put me in touch with serious people; People play the game at a higher level than I do. Future Steps My next step will be to take courses that will work to provide me with the skills to one day start my own business. The business that I will be inspired by is one that will not feel like a job. The one that will eventually lead to complete financial freedom and a sense of work because I want to work, not because I have to. Lesson By is invested and have some skin in the game, a wild dream can start to become a reality. Putting money and time on the line, it makes you take it seriously and make very serious assessments about what is possible. In addition, by expanding your knowledge, you begin to answer questions that you need to answer. Through this process, my fiancée found out where to invest our money and she took some big steps. I learned where my skills were and about the areas I had to go to find that great idea that would make me a boss. If you really want to live as a millionaire, you should be more than interested. You have to be invested!
2. Invest at least 80% of your Off Time in Learning Photo by Konstantin Dyadyun on Unsplash. I used to think you work hard then you should enjoy your time. I worked all day, then came home, went to the gym, dined and then relaxed - which usually meant watching TV, playing guitar, going out with friends, drinking, eating and so on. Basically, all my free time was about consuming what I earned during my time. Millionaire Mindset Rule 2 was a huge change for me. My fiancée and I decided that we won't waste our free time. We'd invest it. At night I started reading articles and books about investments and making money. She will learn to learn stock market and discuss investment options with your friends in the stock market game. On weekends, my fiancée worked on a Saturday, so I decided to make Saturday my day of writing. It started at 2 o'clock and then it quickly became a full day job. I cut my drinking over the weekend and invested a lot more time in productive activities. It will cut our consumption by something we don't need and free up more money to invest. We have become increasingly focused on our goals and more aware of our situation in the world. Millionaire Mindset: Becoming more productive Free time, entertainment and relaxation are all very important. But like everyone else, they have to be done in moderation and with purpose. We spend time doing things that make us happy. But we spend more free time making us stronger, smarter and better. It helps us to live with purpose and guides us to our million-dollar goals. You can't earn a million dollars of living by paying for your free time. Invest your free time so you can spend your free time in the future. Don't work for money, work to Learn Photo Austin Distel Unsplash. By this stage we started to develop millionaire thinking. We started investing our savings and are very grateful that we were in a situation where we could afford to make a significant investment every month. We made modest profits from the stock market and felt very well about our decision to become investors. However, the dream of being financially free and living blissful every day is not yet a reality. And it started to upset, dragging yourself into work every day. How to have a millionaire thinking when you have an average job? In my dreams I was rich, I was the boss - I was making the world a better place with my great wealth and amazing company. But actually, I was still working day in and day out. However, when I decided to change my mindset and decided to see the job as a learning process rather than just the process of trading time for money, I discovered a lot more purpose and passion for it. I came to see that I have teaching skills. This is probably the best area for me to make more money still in education. Don't focus on the money. So I decided not to focus on the money. Currently, the work has the opportunity to learn and develop skills. Where possible, I have been guided by work to meet my new needs; As a teacher I was able to choose activities and topics that played to my advantage. My students also benefited from studying real life problems and skills. Along with this, I became more conscious of learning how to become a better teacher, a better communicator, how best to use my time, how to deal with children and colleagues and how to use new technologies and so on. I've learned more skills and purposefully becomes smarter, stronger and better. Don't just work to The money. Work hard to learn the skills you need to take your life in the direction you want to go.
- 4 Don't learn for fun, learn to create more Sharon McCutcheon on Unsplash. A simple but hard lesson for me. As a teacher, I value learning for the sake of learning, and I like it. However, if you want to have a millionaire mindset, you can't waste your precious time learning things that don't add value. It was hard for me. I loved playing guitar. When I was in Ha Noy, shortly before coming to Ho Chi Minh City and starting this journey, I played guitar all the time. I watched YouTube and studied how to play Spanish-style guitar and how to choose your finger. And I finally mastered the ladder in the sky - well I could play together from start to finish (minus solo). Now, I don't play much guitar anymore. But when I weigh the value of my future success for my family, as opposed to the joy they get from playing guitar, I know I'm making the right decision. For others it may have been the right decision to keep playing guitar, but for me I know in depth I don't have the passion to make it pay - my able-bodied passion is writing, so that's what I'm working on and trying to master. Nurture the passions that you make pay. I have always loved creative writing and studied it at university. When I started at my new school I put my hand up to run a creative writing class and I do time each week to write. However, before I wrote very casually and it was a very enjoyable time filling up. Now I write with the aim: if it is going to take my precious time it should add value. Now I write professionally; I am writing to improve my life and my abilities and I am writing with the aim that I will one day be able to make something out of it. Get rid of bad hobbies. The other thing I love is television. I haven't been able to cut it all together, but now it's a very small amount of my time. It's part of this 20% relaxing and relaxing time and I'm cool with that. In short: If you want a millionaire thinking, you have to do everything to add value. You don't have time to master hobbies and interests that don't add value. But at the same time, if you take a million dollars of thinking for your hobbies, you can turn a waste of time-up into the true path to success. If I thought I could play like Hendrix, I'd be a guitarist, not a writer. Find your true passions and skills and make them pay!
5. Invest at least 10% of your income in vehicles that will generate more Money Photo by Christine Roy on Unsplash. The path to absolute financial freedom by investing money in passive income generators like stock market and property. This is central to the millionaire's thinking. You can never work your way to freedom. You have to use your time and money and make cash flow to you. The obvious streams of wealth creation are stocks and property. We plan to do both, but in the beginning, minimum capital, we started with the stock market. I'll cover more about this at a later stage, but mostly the more you can invest and the sooner you invest, the better. If you can start early and tuck in 10% of your income each month, then through the power of complex interests you can create an income stream that will one day allow you to retire before you are old and will allow you to live well. My partner and I wanted freedom. We want it in 10 years. So we put every spare dollar we can find on the stock market. We make good returns by investing in good companies. We also feel a sense of empowerment when we think of ourselves as the owners of some of the largest companies in the country. Also by investing, we watch our money work for us every day. The benefits of Investing! It is a reminder of what we stand for, and a driver for us to increase our value. We still live well. Not as extravagant as others, but we can't do without. I admit that sometimes I get a little jealous when I see my colleagues jet-going here and there every holiday. However, every day I am buoyed by the idea that one day we will make money by doing nothing at all. What we do not consume today will multiply and provide me with everything I need in the future. It's a very happy thought. Don't work for money, earn at work for you.
6. Shift your motivation from getting Giving Photo to Kat Yukawa at Unsplash. All of these lessons have turned me into a millionaire mindset, the kind of focused thinking and life that's needed if you want to go for huge success. However, there was another massive question that bugged me: Why do I deserve to make millions? I was brought up with a Christian ideal for money - the message was very clearly the rich didn't go to heaven. So it was hard for me to say that I deserved to be a millionaire. It was something obscene wanting to live generously and have more than others. But rule number six gave me the answer. The ethics of Millionaire Mindset if you want to make millions and you want to be a great success, you have to provide value to others. If you want to have a great successful company, you have to provide what your customers need. Also, if my motivation is solely to be rich, so I can have a lot of things, then I won't do it. Now I have a lot of things and I don't really need much more - it would be nice, but I don't need it and it makes it hard to work very hard things you don't need. Also, if it's just about free time for me, then that's not enough. Work gives people a purpose. I used to be a slacker trying to avoid work and I can tell you that it didn't make me feel good. I had a lot of free time and nothing to do. Contribution is the ultimate goal. But what drives me is my need to give to others. I started to develop my idea for business and it is useful because it fixes the problem in the world and it is designed to help humanity with its very real needs. This motivation makes me write every Saturday morning, even after I've worked all week and I wake up already living like a rich man. I see value and I love doing it and that's what I want to do forever. I'm also really really for my investment to do well. Not because I want more things, but because I want more time with my fiancée. I want to be able to spend more time with my son. And I want to be able to help people in need, and I want to be a force for good in the world. If I just wanted money and stuff, I'd give up now. It's too hard to win big just for things I don't need. But I have the passion to make things better. I want to live that million dollar lifestyle! I dream of and I want to help as many people as possible. Make your life a gift to the world and your life will become a gift for you and let you live as a millionaire, regardless of the money in the bank. Now I have a millionaire mindset: In Hardy's list he goes on to explain how to build his business into a million dollar business. I will work through these steps as I begin to develop my own business ideas further. But now, I truly believe that following these initial guidelines have put me on a path of huge success. So Hardy gave a great gift and I have no doubt that he will have all the success that he deserves. In writing I once again fanned the flames for my own mission to success. I sincerely hope this will help inspire you too to look for all the greatness you can imagine for your life. Thank you for letting me share. All the best and continue to strive for success.
